More of a Funeral Affair Than Usual.

By VINCENT ENGELS. From time to time we, with several of our contemporaries, have been pleased to call Knute K. Rockne the greatest coach in football. We have done this not because he was among the pioneers in the race of coaching, like Stagg of Chicago or Yost of Michigan, but because he has developed winning teams at Notre Dame during every one of his four years as head coach there, and secured for the gold and blue an undisputed pre-eminence among those real students of football- the sport friters of New York and Chicago.
